

Ways we use your data

These are some of the important ways we use your data.

If you're not sure what some of this information means, you may want to ask your parent or guardian to read this with you.

Who we share your personal information with

Lloyds Bank is part of Lloyds Banking Group, so to run your account we have to share your personal information with different parts of our group.

Sometimes we also need to share your personal information with other companies who help us provide important services, for example we need to share your data so you can buy something in a shop using your debit card.

Because this account will be opened with your parent or guardian, we will also share some of your personal information with them while they are named on your account. For example they will be able to see what money you have spent.

We look after your personal information

To open your account we need to know some things about you, like your name, address and date of birth.

This is your personal information and Lloyds Bank will hold this information and look after it.

We collect your personal information

We collect information about you when you apply for accounts with us, like you are doing now.

But we will also collect information at other times, for example if you call us on the phone or talk to someone in one of our branches.

As this account is being set up with your parent or guardian, they may also tell us information about you which we will use.

How we use your personal information

We need the information you give us to provide you with an account.

We use your personal information so you can do things, like pay for something you want to buy or check what money you have in your account online.

If you want to know more about how we use your personal information please visit the privacy page on our website.
